State Government Structure

Background

The Minnesota Territory was organized under an 1849 Act of Congress authorizing its people to form a constitution and a state government. A state constitution was adopted and state officers were elected in October 1857. Minnesota was admitted to the Union on May 11, 1858.

Constitution

The Minnesota Constitution provides the basis for the state's government. All actions of the government must comply with the provisions of the constitution. Any proposed changes to the constitution must be approved by a majority of both houses of the Legislature and submitted to the people for their approval. Under the Minnesota Constitution, the powers of government are divided into three separate and distinct branches — legislative, executive, and judicial.

The constitution is printed in the Minnesota Legislative Manual (Blue Book), published by the Office of the Secretary of State. Individual copies of the constitution may be obtained from the Chief Clerk's Office.

Legislative Branch

The legislative branch consists of the House of Representatives and the Senate. The 134 House members are elected to a two-year term; the 67 senators to a four-year term, except in the year preceding redistricting (which takes place after each census), when their term of election is two years.

The Legislature is responsible for making new law, changing or abolishing old law, establishing a state budget and tax policy, proposing changes in the state constitution, electing regents of the University of Minnesota, and overseeing the work of the government. In addition, the Legislature has a number of judicial functions. Each house may punish its own members for "disorderly or contemptuous" behavior, and with a majority vote, can unseat a member.

The House of Representatives has the power to impeach the governor, secretary of state, treasurer, auditor, attorney general and the judges of the Supreme Court, Court of Appeals, and district courts. The Senate conducts proceedings to determine if a conviction is warranted.

Executive Branch

The executive branch of government consists of the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, auditor, treasurer, and attorney general. These are the constitutional officers. The primary function of the executive branch of government is to carry out the day-to-day operation of state government. The work is divided among the six constitutional officers, 20 departments and more than 200 boards, committees, councils, and authorities under the broad guidance of the governor.

As the chief executive of the state, the governor has a number of specific powers and functions. The constitution charges the governor with the responsibility of preparing for the Legislature an annual report on the general condition of the state. In addition, by statute, the governor must submit a proposed budget to the Legislature within three weeks of the first Monday of January in odd-numbered years.

Traditionally, the governor presents his or her legislative priorities to the Legislature at the beginning of each session in an address and in a written report.

Judicial Branch

The main functions of the judicial branch are to resolve disputes between private parties and to hear criminal prosecutions. In the course of performing these duties, the judiciary has the power to rule that a law enacted by the Legislature is unconstitutional; therefore, invalid.

Minnesota's judicial branch is comprised of three levels of courts: the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, and district courts.

The Supreme Court

The Minnesota Supreme Court, comprised of a chief justice and six associate justices, is the final authority in Minnesota's judicial system. The Supreme Court has administrative power over the judges and personnel of the lower courts and regulatory authority over all attorneys in the state. Its other chief responsibility is hearing appeals of decisions made by the Court of Appeals. It also serves as a reviewing body for decisions of the Minnesota Tax Court and Workers' Compensation Court of Appeals. In addition to hearing appeals, the Supreme Court is responsible for overseeing the machinery of justice in the state, for regulating the practice of law, and making recommendations to improve the judicial system.

The Court of Appeals

The 16 judges of the Court of Appeals hear appeals from all the trial courts and from proceedings under the Administrative Procedures Act, including unemployment decisions of the commissioner of economic security. The Court of Appeals' chambers are in the Minnesota Judicial Center, but the judges travel around the state to hear oral arguments in the same judicial district where the trial took place.

The District Court

The district court is the trial court of general jurisdiction (meaning it has the power to hear any civil or criminal case) created by the state constitution. There are more than 254 district court judges among the 10 judicial districts. District courts hear civil actions, gross misdemeanors, and misdemeanor cases, as well as juvenile, family, and probate matters.

The Conciliation Court

Conciliation courts hear civil disputes up to $7,500, except for disputes over consumer credit transactions, which must be less than $4,000 to be heard in conciliation courts.

Before the Session

Certificate of Election

Members' certificates of election are sent by the secretary of state or the county clerk directly to the chief clerk of the House or the secretary of the Senate, under a 1979 law.

The Chief Clerk's Office retains the certificate until the new member is sworn in. A 1981 law provides that the chief clerk return the member's certificate to the member at that time. A member can expect to receive the certificate a few days after being sworn in.

Election of Caucus Leaders

Usually within a week or two after the general election, members who affiliate with each party get together on an informal basis to organize and elect leaders for their caucus. Each caucus can nominate a speaker-designate (the speaker is officially elected by the members of the entire House). The majority caucus also elects a majority leader and a majority whip, and the minority caucus elects a minority leader and minority whip. Selection of assistant leaders is done by each caucus, but the time and manner of this selection process varies from biennium to biennium and caucus to caucus.

The caucuses also meet periodically throughout the session, primarily to exchange information on various issues.

House Rules and Joint Rules

The constitution provides for each house of the Legislature to establish its own rules of procedure. Each biennium, the House does this by adopting the Permanent Rules of the House.

The job of drafting permanent House rules is started prior to the beginning of the session by the Committee on Rules and Legislative Administration (Rules Committee). Early in the session, a set of rules is presented to the entire House for adoption. Until the new rules are adopted, the House adopts the rules of the previous session as temporary rules. Proposed rules can be amended on the House floor.

In addition, Joint Rules of the Senate and the House are adopted. The Joint Rules apply when the House and Senate meet together in joint convention, in conference committees, and in procedural matters which must be the same in both houses.

Selection of Committee Chairs, Assignments to Committees

The number of standing committees and their areas of responsibility are set each biennium by the speaker. Under the House rules, the speaker-designate submits this information to the leader of the minority caucus 30 days before a new session convenes.

The speaker names the chairs, vice-chairs, and members of each committee. Following the general election, each member may indicate which committees are preferred. The number of committee assignments per member can vary from session to session. Generally, members serve on three or four standing committees. Majority caucus members submit requests directly to the speaker-designate (the nominee elected by the majority caucus). The minority caucus members make their requests through the minority leader who submits recommendations for minority representation on the standing committees to the speaker-designate at least 15 days before convening a new session.

Committees are balanced with respect to party, occupation, and geographic area represented by the members of the House.

Due to scheduling conflicts, assignment to one committee may preclude another committee assignment.

Committee Scopes

House Committee Structure

The Minnesota Legislature — the House of Representatives and the Senate — is divided into many committees. Since thousands of bills are introduced during each two-year legislative session, it is impossible for any one legislator to become an expert in all areas. So, each legislator serves on three to five committees, which allows him or her to focus on just a few areas of public policy.

In a sense, the committee structure forms the heart of the Legislature. Although many people believe that most of the legislative process occurs on the House and Senate floors, it is in committee where most substantive action occurs. It is there where each bill is pored over and dissected, where key amendments are added and sections are deleted, and where recommendations for approval are given or withheld.

Below is an outline describing the policy areas for which each House committee is responsible.

Agriculture & Rural Development Finance

Considers funding proposals for all agriculture-related programs. This includes the Department of Agriculture, the Board of Animal Health, the Horticultural Society, and the Agriculture Utilization and Research Institute.

Agriculture Policy

Oversees state agriculture policy, programs, and regulations; assists Minnesota farmers by promoting value-added industries; promotes interstate and international exports of farm products and develops marketing strategies for Minnesota-grown agricultural commodities; reviews legislation regarding the regulation and inspection of farm pesticides, food safety, and crop protection; oversees programs to encourage best management practices; oversees the Department of Agriculture; and works with environmental agencies and the University of Minnesota on a regular basis.

Capital Investment

Reviews and approves capital appropriations for the state; sets policy related to the sale of bonds, debt management, and the manner and form in which capital requests are received; considers bonding requests from state agencies and members of the Legislature; allocates state bond proceeds for capital projects which meet a public purpose and for public facilities owned by public entities, and monitors the construction of all public improvements; and oversees capital budget-related activities of the administration and finance departments.

General obligation bonds may only be used for land acquisition, predesign/design expenses, construction, or improvement of specific projects and tangible fixed assets. General operating expenses including services, programs, and general master planning are not bondable expenses.

Civil Law

Reviews all areas of Minnesota's civil laws, including family law, personal injury law, probate, landlord-tenant, nuisance law and data privacy statutes.

Commerce, Jobs & Economic Development Policy

Hears legislation related to issues affecting Minnesota consumers, including the licensing of individuals and firms in professions such as insurance, engineering, real estate, architecture, landscaping, accounting, and private investigation; reviews measures pertaining to banks, savings and loans, and credit unions; considers policy issues related to tourism; examines consumer rights in insurance and all aspects of the insurance industry; and reviews matters related to labor management and liquor. (This committee is a combination of the former Commerce Committee and Jobs & Economic Development Policy Committee.)

Examines issues relating to: air and water quality; pollution and its prevention; land use and preservation; ground and surface water resources; solid, hazardous, and radioactive waste management and reduction; forestry and mining; wildlife protection; hunting, fishing, and other outdoor public recreational activities; and environmental education.

Ethics

Reviews ethics complaints against members and staff. In the past, the Ethics Committee has developed an ethical code for members.

Family & Early Childhood Education Finance

Develops policies and funds governmental and non-governmental programs that attempt to increase the well-being of children and families. Committee accounts are divided into the broad topic headings of Children and Family Support; Community and Systems Change; Prevention and Intervention; and Self Sufficiency. Many of their accounts fall under the Community Services Division of the Department of Children, Families and Learning. Two major committee initiatives are child care and adult basic education.

Governmental Operations & Veterans Affairs Policy

Reviews legislation related to the overall operations of state government, including: the purchase of materials and services by state agencies; state employee contracts; structural changes to legislative commissions; state and local government information technology; agency rulemaking procedures; Capitol complex improvements and maintenance; the composition of state agencies; and the use of professional and technical services. Higher Education Finance

Determines operating budgets for the University of Minnesota, the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities, the Higher Education Facilities Authority, and the Higher Education Services Office, including financial aid and programs for students at both public and private institutions.

Jobs & Economic Development Finance

Reviews and recommends funding for programs and agencies related to jobs, housing and economic development, including the Department of Commerce, Department of Economic Security, Minnesota Historical Society, Housing Finance Agency, Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitation Board, Department of Labor and Industry, Minnesota Technology, Inc. and the Department of Trade and Economic Development.

Judiciary Finance

Reviews and proposes budgets for the following state accounts: Board of Judicial Standards, Board of Public Defense, Court of Appeals, Department of Corrections, District Court, Ombudsman for Corrections, Crime Victims Ombudsman, Department of Human Rights, Judicial Retirement, Private Detectives Board, Department of Public Safety (criminal justice sections), Peace Officer Standards and Training Board, Sentencing Guidelines Commission, Supreme Court, Tax Court, and the Uniform Guidelines Commission.

K-12 Education Finance

Provides policy direction and funding for the state's K-12 education system, including all public school districts, academies, the Department of Children, Families and Learning, education finance (school aids), Minnesota Center for Arts Education, the Faribault academies for people who are blind and for those who are deaf, public libraries, and the Permanent School Fund.

Local Government & Metropolitan Affairs

Examines issues related to all forms of local government — townships, cities, counties, metropolitan agencies, and regional development commissions.

The committee and subcommittees conduct hearings and make recommendations concerning a variety of local government issues including, but not limited to: planning and land use regulation; annexation and incorporation; tax increment financing programs; the structure and authority of governing bodies and advisory boards and commissions; the structure and operations of the Metropolitan Council and agencies; the relationship between state and local governments; and the inter-relationships among the local and metropolitan units.

Redistricting

Reviews the 2000 Census and recommends a new districting plan for Minnesota.

Regulated Industries

Hears issues related to regulated industries, such as utilities, telecommunications, and cable services. (This committee was formerly a subcommittee of the Commerce Policy Committee.)

Rules & Legislative Administration

Chaired by the Majority Leader, the Committee on Rules and Legislative Administration fulfills two important functions. It oversees the administrative operations of the House of Representatives, and it coordinates legislative activity on the House floor.

Included among the committee's operational functions are: establishing a budget for the House of Representatives, as well as budgets for each committee; adopting policies and resolutions pertaining to the operations of the House; reviewing and approving personnel policies; and developing Permanent Rules for the House, as well as Joint Rules for the House and Senate.

Committee Scopes

As part of its coordinating function, the committee designates bills to be placed on the Calendar for the Day, acts upon legislation proposing amendments to the state constitution, and acts upon bills and member resolutions referred to the committee.

State Government Finance

Reviews and recommends appropriations for numerous accounts, including: Administrative Hearings Office, Campaign Finance and Public Disclosure Board, Capitol Area Architectural and Planning Board, contingent accounts, Department of Administration, Department of Employee Relations, Department of Finance, Department of Military Affairs, Department of Revenue, Department of Veterans Affairs, Disabled American Veterans, joint legislative commissions, Gambling Control Board, Government Innovation and Cooperation Board, Intergovernmental Information Systems Advisory Council, Legislature, Military Order of the Purple Heart, Minnesota Amateur Sports Commission, Minnesota Planning Office, Minnesota Racing Commission, Minnesota State Retirement System, Office of the Governor and Lieutenant Governor, Office of the Attorney General, Office of the Secretary of State, Office of the State Auditor, Office of the Treasurer, Public Broadcasting, Public Employees Retirement Association, Salary Supplement, State Arts Board, Minnesota Humanities Commission, State Board of Investment, and Veterans of Foreign Wars.

agriculture, commercial/industrial and seasonal recreational property. Other legislation heard in committee includes tax increment financing, taconite taxes, transit zone tax, and border city zone tax incentives.

Sales and Income Tax Division

Considers issues related to sales and income taxes.

Transportation Finance

Reviews and recommends funding for Greater Minnesota Transit Operations, Metropolitan Transit Operations, Minnesota Safety Council, Department of Public Safety (transportation-related areas such as Administrative Services, Driver and Vehicle Services, Pipeline Services, State Patrol, and Traffic Safety), Department of Transportation, and other Trunk Highway Contingent Accounts. The majority of funds appropriated by this committee are from the Trunk Highway Fund and are constitutionally dedicated receipts from gas tax and motor vehicle registration revenues. Such revenues may only be used on the trunk highway system. The committee also appropriates general fund money for transit operations and other non-trunk highway activities.

Transportation Policy

Oversees the Department of Transportation, Driver and Vehicle Services and State Patrol within the Department of Public Safety, and the transportation, transit, and airway portions of the Metropolitan Council. This committee addresses highways, trucking, railroads, waterways, airports, and transit systems.

Ways & Means

Sets the aggregate biennial spending and state budget for the House of Representatives. Passes the House budget resolution and individual spending targets, setting the price of government, and certifies each budget bill from House finance and tax committees so that it reconciles with the budget resolution and spending targets.

House Members' Rights

House Members' Rights

Members of the House of Representatives have many duties, responsibilities, and rights. Below is a sampling.

Speech and Debate Privilege

The Minnesota Constitution provides that legislators may not be "questioned" in any other place for speech and debate in the Legislature. (Minnesota Constitution, Article IV, Section 10.) In general, the courts have held that the identically worded provision of the U.S. Constitution provides a relatively broad privilege for matters relating to legislative activities. For example, the privilege protects a legislator from liability for libel or slander for statements made in floor or committee debate. Similarly, the privilege prevents litigants from compelling a legislator to testify or provide documents relating to his or her legislative activities or duties (under most circumstances).

In order to qualify for the protection of the privilege, however, the legislator's actions or conduct must fall within what the courts describe as the "legitimate legislative sphere." Matters not directly or integrally related to the legislative process and activities are not privileged. For example, press releases and letters to constituents have been held not to be privileged. The exact scope and extent of the privilege will depend in each instance upon the particular facts and circumstances of the case.

To sum up this somewhat confusing and ambiguous issue: In general, the constitution protects a legislator from legal trouble for what he or she might say in official House debate. Legislators are not protected, however, from libel or slander or other problems that might arise from press releases or communications with constituents or other persons.

The issue does not often arise, but legislators should be aware of the possibility and try to understand the elements of protected and unprotected speech.

Conflicts of Interest

A House member, required to vote on an issue that would substantially affect either his or her personal financial interests or a business he or she is associated with, must deliver to the speaker a written statement describing the issue and the nature of the potential conflict of interest. The House, at his or her request, may then excuse the member from voting on the question.

Holding Other Offices

The state constitution provides that a legislator cannot hold any other state or federal office, except postmaster or notary public. A member who is elected or appointed to another office, must resign from the Legislature.

The Minnesota Supreme Court defines an "office" under this provision as a position in which the person has authority under law, either alone or with equals, to determine public policy or make a final decision not subject to another's supervisory approval.

Court cases or attorney general opinions have indicated that legislators may not hold the following offices:

- city charter commission member
- city council member
- civil service board member
- municipal assessor
- county attorney
- park board member
- county commissioner
- police chief

- county veterans service officer
- school board member
- county welfare board member
- state fair board member
- deputy registrar of deeds
- mayor
- deputy registrar of motor vehicles

Some positions which legislators may hold, according to the same sources, include:

- employment with any government unit where the individual does not make final decisions that are subject to no one else's review
- architect
- cashier
- engineer
- inspector or investigator for regulatory agency
- police officer
- attorney
- census supervisor
- instructor

Notary Public Privilege

By law, all members during their term of office, are notaries. However, they may not receive any fee for notarizing documents. When acting as a notary, a House member must sign as follows: "Rep. _____, District _____, Minnesota. My term expires January 7, 2003."

Also, House Administrative Services and the Office of the Revisor of Statutes each have a staff member on hand to act as a notary. Some other departments may have a staff member who is a notary as well.

Arrest Privilege

The state constitution provides that members cannot be arrested while the Legislature is in session or when they are on their way to or from the session, except in cases of felony, treason, or breach of the peace. This means the privilege applies to misdemeanors or gross misdemeanors, excluding what the courts consider a breach of the peace. (Examples: assault or threatened assault, breaking and entering, driving while intoxicated, speeding, violent verbal attacks, or other acts that cause serious alarm to people in the vicinity.)

The privilege only prevents detaining a member during session; it does not provide immunity from prosecution after the session ends. The protection is not automatic. A member can either assert the privilege in court or choose to waive it.

Civil Liability Exemption

A member is not liable under state law in a civil law suit for any act done in the course of his or her official duties.

Excused Court Appearances

A civil or criminal action in which a member is a party, attorney, or witness may not be tried while the Legislature is in session or during an interim hearing. A member cannot be required to appear as a witness in court proceedings held during the session or any interim hearing, unless the court orders the member to appear and the speaker of the House, or the entire House, consents to the order.

The member may waive these privileges. In the event of a waiver, the matter can be tried at times that will not conflict with the member's legislative duties.

Criminal Offenses

It is a gross misdemeanor for anyone, by intimidation or otherwise, to prevent a member from attending a committee or floor session, casting a vote, or performing any official act.

It is a felony for anyone, by threat, deception, or other unlawful means, to attempt to influence a legislator in voting or performing any other official duty.

Extra-Legislative Employment Rights

Private Employment

A member who has a permanent position with a private employer in the state at the beginning of the legislative session must be allowed to resume his or her old job or a position of similar seniority, status, and pay if he or she reapplies within 30 days after the end of the session.

A member of the Legislature must be restored to his or her job without loss of seniority. The returning member must be allowed to participate in insurance and other benefits provided to other employees. Retirement benefits may not be reduced because of time spent in legislative service. A member cannot be discharged without good cause for three years after being restored to the job, except in inverse order of seniority.

No employer or union can discharge or otherwise discriminate against a legislator who is an employee or member, in retaliation for statements made or beliefs held in his or her capacity as a member.

A member can sue an employer who fails to comply with these provisions. The court can order the employer to obey the law and compensate the member for any loss of wages or benefits caused by the employer's non-compliance.

Public Employment

A legislator who is an employee or appointed officer of a municipality, school district, other political subdivision, or state-operated school is entitled to unpaid leave of absence during any or all of his or her term, with a right of reinstatement after the leave.

After the last legislative day in the calendar year, the member: 1) must be reinstated to the position he or she held before the beginning of the session, or 2) must be given a position of similar seniority, status, and pay, if available, as long as:

- the position has not been abolished;
- the member reapplies for the job in writing within 30 days after the last legislative day in the calendar year; and
- the request for reinstatement is made no later than 10 years after the leave was granted.

After reinstatement, the member has the same rights to accrued and future seniority status, efficiency rating, and benefits as if he or she were employed during the leave.

The member has no right to compensation for the period between the first and last legislative day in a calendar year and cannot be removed or discharged from employment for at least one year after reinstatement, except for cause after notice and hearing.

A member retains all pension rights accrued up to the time of taking leave. For purposes of determining pension-vesting rights, a member is treated as if he or she were at his or her extra-legislative job while on leave at the Legislature.

A member employed in the public sector is entitled to receive pension benefits for legislative service and for his or her other job. However, the member will not be paid benefits by both the Legislature and the other employer for the time he or she is on leave to serve in the Legislature.

Getting Around

Useful Information

The Capitol complex functions much like a small community. The following bits of information are designed to answer some of the most frequently asked questions.

Bike Racks

If you bike to work, there are bicycle racks on the north side of the State Office Building parking ramp and on the west side of the Transportation Building. You don't have to pay for ramp parking privileges to use the ramp bicycle rack. Call the Sergeant-at-Arms Office, (651) 296-4860, to arrange for key card access to the ramp.

Bill Status

Contact the House Index Department, (651) 296-6646, or track bills on the Legislature's Web site (<http://www.leg.state.mn.us>).

Building Maintenance

Contact Plant Management, (651) 296-6800.

Bus Service to Downtown

A bus ride on the #16 to downtown St. Paul costs 25 cents during most of the day and 50 cents during rush hour. To go downtown from the State Office Building, catch the bus on Constitution Avenue. To return from downtown, catch the bus on Minnesota Street.

Cash Machines

Automatic teller machines are located in the State Office Building (ground floor) and nearby in the Transportation Building (ground floor) and the Centennial Office Building (ground floor).

Change Machine

Change for dollar bills can be obtained from a change machine in the vending area in the basement of the State Office Building.

Day Care

If you have children or dependent adults in day care, you may be eligible for State of Minnesota Dependent Care Expense Account (DCEA). For further information, contact House Administrative Services, 198 State Office Building, (651) 296-6648.

If you are looking for a child care facility, try Capitol Child Care Center at (651) 227-9409. The center serves only state and legislative employees.

Dining

Cafeterias are located in most state buildings. The small State Office Building cafeteria is usually open only when the Legislature is in session. The newly-renovated Capitol Cafe in the State Capitol building offers breakfast and lunch year-round. A large, year-round cafeteria also is available in the Transportation Building.

Also, there are many restaurants within walking distance. On Rice Street, the Lagoon Vietnamese Restaurant, White Castle, and El Bravo Mexican Restaurant. On University Avenue, you will find McDonald's, Burger King, Mai Village, and other restaurants. There also are dozens of restaurants only minutes away in downtown St. Paul. Bus rides downtown cost 25 cents. You can catch the bus on Constitution Avenue.

The First Day

Defining a Session

The term “session” has several meanings in the legislative process:

Biennial Session

The period during which the Legislature meets, such as “The 82nd Session” (2001-2002).

Regular Session

The annual meeting of the Legislature between the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January, and the first Monday after the third Saturday in May. (This time period occurs during the first year of a biennium in an odd-numbered year.)

The constitution states that “the legislature shall meet at the seat of government in regular session in each biennium at the time prescribed by law not exceeding a total of 120 legislative days.”

Special Session

The time period for convening called by the governor “under extraordinary circumstances” during an interim or after the expiration of 120 legislative days in a biennium or after the date prescribed by law for annual adjournment. The governor may not dictate the matters to be considered or the length of sitting.

Daily Session

A meeting of both the House and Senate to transact certain business. (See Appendix: Glossary — Joint Convention.)

Convening — Opening Ceremonies

In odd-numbered years, the legislative session convenes on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January at noon in the House chamber. The House is called to order by the secretary of state who presides over the meeting until a speaker is elected by the members. The secretary of state also appoints a member as chief clerk pro tem who first calls the roll by legislative district.

Oath of Office

Immediately following the calling of the roll by district, the oath of office is administered to members-elect by a member of the judiciary. In taking the oath of office, the members of the Legislature agree to support the U.S. Constitution, the Minnesota Constitution, and to discharge faithfully the duties of office. Following the oath, the roll is called in alphabetical order. Below is the text of the oath:

Do you solemnly swear or affirm that you will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of Minnesota, and that you will faithfully discharge the duties of the office to which you have just been elected to the best of your judgment and ability, so help you God?

Election of Officers

Following the second roll call, the secretary of state calls for nominations for speaker of the House. Upon election by a majority of all members present and voting, the speaker takes the chair.

Minnesota law provides that members elect the following House officers: chief clerk, first and second assistant clerks, index clerk, chief sergeant-at-arms, assistant sergeants-at-arms, chaplain, postmaster, and assistant postmaster, who, following their election, are sworn in.

Organizational resolutions and announcements by the speaker are next on the agenda.

Selection of Permanent Desks

The selection of permanent desks is done by resolution under which the speaker directs each caucus leader to assign permanent desks to their members for the session.

Committees

Committees meet on a regular basis according to a weekly schedule at least once or twice a week. The first few committee meetings bring members up to date on issues to be addressed in that particular committee.

The committee system is an extremely important part of the legislative process. In the early part of the legislative session, almost all of a legislator's work is done in committee, where a bill's fate is often decided.

After the first month of session, the committee load gets heavier as more bills are introduced and referred to committees. By the last month of the session, most committees have completed their work and the focus shifts more to floor action and conference committees.

Because there are usually more than 1,000 bills introduced each session, legislators serve on a limited number of committees. Most serve on three to five, which allows members to focus on just a few areas of public policy.

A Legislative Day

Minnesota law defines a legislative day as one on which either the House or Senate is in session. A legislative day begins at 7 a.m. and continues until 7 a.m. of the following calendar day. The Legislature cannot meet in regular session after the first Monday following the third Saturday of May in any year.

Daily Sessions

The convening time for daily sessions is set by the House rules. For the 2001-2002 session, the regular meeting time will be 3 p.m., unless otherwise ordered. Senate rules specify that the daily Senate session will be at 8:30 a.m., unless otherwise ordered.

The guidelines for procedure of the House session come from many sources — the constitution, Minnesota Statutes, House and joint rules, custom and usage, and finally, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure. The most complete outline of House procedures is contained in the Permanent Rules of the House which includes the order of daily business, guidelines for debate and decorum, precedence of motions, and voting procedures. A copy of the rules will be provided each member soon after their final adoption. Otherwise, they are available from the Chief Clerk's Office.

Legislative Procedure

The Process

Every November in even-numbered years, about 2 million Minnesotans go to the polls to select peers to represent them in the Minnesota Legislature.

The new Legislature includes people from all walks of life and professions. The diverse group of men and women work together to set public policy.

Ideas

Ideas for new laws and changes in existing law come from many sources. Legislators receive and evaluate thousands of facts, statistics, and expressions of opinion in the course of a two-year session.

Some legislators get ideas for new laws when they sample grass roots opinion and hear constituents' suggestions during campaigns. Some good suggestions come in a legislator's mail, from telephone calls, or in conversations with people in the district. Other proposals come from a lawmaker's experience on the job, at home, and in the community. New laws are proposed by special interest groups, individuals, and groups with special needs and problems. A significant number of proposals come from within the government itself. New legislators are sometimes surprised by the volume of proposals generated by various governmental units.

The governor presents ideas and priorities in messages to the Legislature. The other constitutional offices, state departments and agencies, local, regional, and county units, and legislative committees and study commissions all suggest new laws.

The fate of each idea is determined by the members who guide its journey through the Legislature, and by the legislators who judge its merits at each stage of consideration.

Types of Legislation

The House deals with two major types of legislation: bills and resolutions.

Bills

Bills are for the purpose of making new laws, or amending or repealing existing statutes and laws. House files (HFs) and Senate files (SFs) are introduced in their respective bodies. All bills have a title, enacting clause, and body.

The title of the bill tells what the bill is amending, repealing, or creating and provides references to the Minnesota statutes or laws that would be affected.

The enacting clause of the bill appears after the title and reads as follows: "BE IT ENACTED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF MINNESOTA."

The body of the bill is the proposal itself which, if enacted, would amend or repeal existing laws or statutes or create new ones.

Committee proposals are bills which have been written by a committee. It may be a bill which is composed of numerous smaller bills that have been under consideration in the committee, or it may be a number of ideas which have been brought to the committee's attention through public hearings and constituent mail. The committee bill's author is the chair of the committee. Committee bills may be introduced and referred to another committee, but if no referral is made, the bill gets its first reading and is laid over one day. The next day, the committee bill receives its second reading and is placed on the General Register or the Consent Calendar if recommended by the committee. A notation on a bill such as "Adams for the Committee on Agriculture" shows the bill is the product of an entire committee (committee bill).

The words "by request" after the chief author's signature indicate the bill is introduced at the request of a constituent, and it does not necessarily have the support of the sponsoring legislator.

Resolutions

Resolutions are formal actions of the Legislature which express intent on the part of one or both bodies, but are not codified into Minnesota statutes upon passage.

A House resolution or Senate resolution is one which is acted upon by only one body and expresses the intent of the body.

A House concurrent resolution or Senate concurrent resolution is one which originates in the House or Senate respectively, is acted upon, and sent to the other body for approval.

Resolutions memorializing the president, Congress or federal agencies are treated in the same manner as bills: they are given a House file (HF) number or Senate file (SF) number, assigned to a committee, and given three readings in each house. Resolutions of this type are enrolled and printed in the Session Laws of the State of Minnesota (informally called "Session Laws") for the year in which they were passed, but not codified in the statutes.

Unnumbered resolutions are used when actions apply to a specific session and deal with internal operations of one house. Actions such as the allocation of stationery and stamps are usually proposed to the House in unnumbered resolutions.

A Joint Resolution is an action of the Legislature meeting in joint convention.

The Drafting Process

A bill or resolution may be drafted by anyone — legislator, legislative staff member, state or local agency employee, private group, or an individual. But only a legislator can introduce a bill or resolution.

A member who wishes to have a bill drafted may bring that request to the Office of the Revisor of Statutes, to the House Research Department, or in some instances, to the member's own caucus staff. When a member requests a draft, he or she may provide whatever information is convenient for the member. It may be simply the description of a problem or it may be a prepared draft of new law, or it may be anything in between those extremes. Oral drafting requests are often sufficient, but supporting written material may be useful. Communication through an intermediary can cause delays so a member may find it convenient to work personally with a drafter. Drafting is done by the research department or the revisor's office without regard to party affiliation or member status. All drafting by these offices is done on a confidential basis.

Drafters are very conscious of the need to provide the member with what he or she wants and not to impose their own ideas on the work. They may ask questions to help with the drafting. Drafters, particularly those in the research offices, are always available to meet with constituents, interest groups, and lobbyists. Face-to-face discussion is frequently helpful to assure that the member's intentions are being carried out. The drafter will prepare as many preliminary drafts as the member finds useful. Depending upon the complexity of the proposed bill, drafting may take from one day to several weeks. After the bill is introduced, the drafter generally is available to prepare amendments or assist in any other useful way. House research staff members are assigned to staff legislative committees, and hence, are available for drafting amendments during committee deliberations. House Research Department staff members also prepare bill summaries for the committees.

A list of staff members with committee assignments and drafting specialties is circulated at the beginning of the session by the House Research Department and the Office of the Revisor of Statutes.

Before introduction, each bill or resolution must be submitted to the Office of the Revisor of Statutes for final preparation. The revisor's office serves both the House and the Senate and is responsible for the technical preparation of bills for introduction.

Bill Introduction

In the House, the speaker assigns each bill and numbered resolution to one of the standing committees. The chief clerk then assigns each House file a number, which will identify it in its travels, much as a luggage tag might identify a suitcase even when the contents are rearranged, changed, or replaced with new items.

The Senate has traditionally used a somewhat different path to introduction. Generally, bills and resolutions are given a number and assigned to a committee by the Senate president through the administrative procedures of the secretary of the Senate.

First Reading/Reporting

The state constitution requires that each bill be reported on three separate days in each body before votes for final passage can occur. These reports of the bill are called readings. A bill is given its first reading at the time it is introduced. Each reading is a signal that an action or series of actions have taken place. The constitution requires that a full day must pass between each reading, unless the constitutional rules and the rules of the body are suspended by a two-thirds vote of the House.

The Committee

The committee is the heart of the legislative process where the most detailed work of the Legislature takes place.

It is the job of each committee to hold public hearings on bills, to put each bill it hears into its best form, and to recommend to the full body only those bills which the committee feels merit further consideration.

Many bills affect several aspects of life in Minnesota. These may be studied by more than one committee before returning to the House or Senate floor.

When a bill is referred to committee, copies are made available to legislators and the public.

The first time a bill can be amended (changed) or killed (voted down, tabled, or ignored) is in committee.

The committee has a number of choices for action. It may:

- recommend that a bill pass as introduced (with its original wording);
- recommend changes in a bill (amendments) to correct the wording, add or remove provisions, or design alternative language that may clarify, weaken, or strengthen a bill, and return it to the floor;
- delete everything after the enacting clause and insert a new bill. A “delete everything” amendment, in effect, creates a new bill, because everything after the enacting clause is stricken and replaced with new language*;
- combine two or more bills on the same subject into a single bill, retaining one bill’s House file number;
- send detailed, complex, or controversial bills to a subcommittee which can hear public testimony, call in experts, suggest amendments, report back to the full committee, ignore a bill, table it, or vote it down;
- recommend that a bill pass, with or without amendments, and send it to another committee for further study;
- refer a bill to another committee or return it to the full House with no recommendations;
- write a committee bill based on the suggestions of one or more regular bills; or
- kill a bill by voting it down, tabling it, delaying action, ignoring it, or returning it to its author.

The chief author is the spokesperson for the bill in committee.

There may be a number of questions from committee members, so the chief author must have a good understanding of the bill. The chief author cannot rely on eloquence to steer a bill safely through the committee. The most effective presentation is a well-organized, concise recitation of the most appropriate information, backed up by facts and statistics. Bill summaries are often prepared with staff aid. Staff may also be asked to speak or comment in committee.

Opponents and proponents of a measure may testify before the committee. Any citizen may express his or her views at these hearings. The chief author can invite witnesses to speak for the bill. Opponents may also organize interested people to testify. Legislators who serve on the committee can question the author and witnesses.

When time is limited, the committee chair may make up a list of people who have asked to speak and divide the time among the different points of view so a sampling of public opinion is heard.

After hearing from the author and any other citizens who wish to speak, the committee members try to reach a consensus. They must give careful scrutiny to the bills heard in committee and use their best judgment when weighing public testimony in attempting to make changes or retain original wording and in making recommendations on measures.

Since no legislator can study every bill that is introduced, a lawmaker relies on the committee process and the hard work and careful consideration of colleagues to determine which bills are most important, and in what form they will be taken up on the floor.

No committee hears every bill referred to it. Committee chairs schedule hearings on a bill after a request from the chief author has been received. In the past legislative session, less than 10 percent of the bills introduced became law and the majority of the proposals were eliminated in committee. To speak of percentages can be somewhat misleading because the total includes companion bills, bills dealing with several aspects of the same problem which may be combined into a single measure, and similar bills introduced by different authors in the same house.

Non-controversial bills may pass in minutes. Some measures require weeks or months of committee and subcommittee study before a final recommendation is made.

Bills are seldom judged strictly on partisan lines. Coalitions form and shift, and a legislator often finds that an ally on one matter is a tough opponent on another, regardless of party affiliation.

Before a vote is taken, the chief author may survey committee members checking their positions, answering technical questions, and assessing the chance for an affirmative committee decision. Most of the "lobbying" on a bill involves educating committee members.

Generally, it should be used only when absolutely necessary. Assistance in preparing a “delete everything” amendment is available through House Research or the Revisor’s Office.

Lobbyists on all sides of a question contact committee members, provide information and arguments to back up their points of view, and supply background data on their concerns.

Proponents and opponents may get together to discuss compromises that will satisfy most members, or the author may poll individual committee members on amendments to help move the bill through committee.

Votes in committee are by voice, unless a roll call is requested.

A majority vote is needed to amend a bill, or to change its status within the legislative process. Any motion to amend, adopt, or other action which results in a tie vote is defeated. A defeated motion may be reconsidered under the rules of committee procedure, though it is usually best to consult with the committee chair if a motion to reconsider is contemplated. (Members of the committee who do not support a committee action on a bill can submit a "minority report" which is taken up on the floor of the House before the report of the majority of the committee.)

If the committee cannot reach agreement, or does not hold hearings on a bill, the bill has ended its journey. (While it is technically possible to bring a bill to the full House without committee approval, this tactic is not frequently attempted, and is even less frequently successful.)

Second Reading

Committee actions are recorded in the committee report compiled by the committee's legislative assistant, approved by the chair, and sent to the House floor for a second reading and adoption. Reports of committees are recommendations only until the report is adopted by a majority vote on the floor. Approval is normally routine. The committee report on a bill also includes a recommendation for placement of that bill on the Consent Calendar or the General Register.

Consent Calendar

Committees can recommend that noncontroversial bills be placed on the Consent Calendar (pink) in the House. These bills bypass the General Register and are eligible for debate and possible amendment, third reading, and final passage in one day. They usually pass with little or no debate. (Ten representatives can object to Consent Calendar placement, automatically sending the bill to the General Register.) The Consent Calendar is taken up early in the daily session.

General Register

Most bills are then placed on a list called the General Register (white), which is like a parking lot where bills wait to be taken up by the full House. (It does not include noncontroversial bills that are placed on the Consent Calendar.) Bills are placed on the General Register in the order they receive a second reading. Each bill must be on the General Register, distributed to each member, and available to the public before it can be considered by the House on the Calendar for the Day or the Fiscal Calendar.

Calendar for the Day

The Calendar for the Day (yellow) is a list of bills to be considered by the House that day.

The calendar is created by the Rules Committee, which selects bills from the General Register for consideration. The Rules Committee is required to set the list by 5 p.m. on the day before the bills are to be considered by the full House, but that requirement is lifted late in the legislative session.

The House must consider each item in the order that it was listed on the calendar. Bills on the calendar are eligible for debate and possible amendment.

There also is another method of getting a bill on the Calendar for the Day. If a bill sits on the General Register for more than 10 legislative days, a member can make a motion to place the bill on the calendar. To pass, such a motion requires the approval of three-fifths of the whole House.

Fiscal Calendar

Any bill related to finances, taxes, or raising revenue that is on the General Register can be considered by the House at the request of the chair of the Ways & Means Committee or the Taxes Committee. Such bills are placed on the Fiscal Calendar (green), and from there, the bills are eligible for debate and possible amendment.

A chair is required to announce his or her intention to place a bill on the Fiscal Calendar by 5 p.m. on the day before the bill is to be considered by the full House, but that requirement is lifted late in the legislative session.

Third Reading and Final Passage

Once all proposed amendments have been dealt with, the bill is given its third reading. The bill cannot be further amended without unanimous consent.

At this point, controversial bills may be debated at length, but usually the chief author briefly outlines the bill and stands for questions and a brief discussion. Unless there is controversy, the full House proceeds to a roll call vote.

All votes on final passage are recorded by name in the official record, the Journal of the House.

A majority vote of all elected members — not just a majority of those present — is required. In the House, 68 votes are needed; in the Senate, 34 votes.

Authorization of bonds backed by the full faith and credit of the state requires a three-fifths majority of all members elected. In the House, 81 votes are needed; in the Senate, 41 votes.

Preliminary Approval

Passage in one body of the Legislature marks the half-way point in a bill's legislative journey. A bill must pass both the House and Senate in identical form before it can become law. When one body of the Legislature passes a bill, it is transmitted by message (conveyed through an administrative procedure) to the opposite body, where it is again subject to the steps outlined above.

There are several ways to speed up consideration in the opposite house. Chief authors of companion bills can attempt to coordinate House and Senate action. The first bill to win final approval is transmitted to the opposite house. For example, if the Senate version of a bill passes first, the Senate file is transmitted to the House.

If the House companion bill is still in a House committee, the Senate bill will be referred to the House committee. The committee will then take up for consideration the Senate bill that was referred to the committee. Any subsequent committee action will be on the Senate bill, although the committee can (and often does) insert the House language.

Comparisons/Substitutions

If the House companion is awaiting floor action on one of the agenda lists, the two bills are "referred for comparison" and they are read against each other and the differences are reported. This work is done in the name of the chief clerk by the revisor of statutes. Comparison reports are provided to the chief author, the majority and minority leaders, and their assistant leaders, and one copy is filed at the House Desk. The copy filed at the desk is available for inspection by any member of the House.

The chief clerk reports whether the bills were found to be identical or different, "identical with certain exceptions." If the bills are identical, the Senate bill will be substituted (take the place of the House companion) in a motion by the chief author. The House bill is then "indefinitely postponed" by the same motion. If the bills are found to be different, "identical with certain exceptions," the rules must be suspended to substitute the Senate bill with its differences for the House bill.

In either case, once the substitution is made, the House bill is indefinitely postponed.

In the House, the language of the bill that already has passed the Senate automatically takes the place of the language that was recommended by the House committee. If the chief author wants to go back to the House language, he or she makes a motion to amend (generally in the form of a delete-everything amendment that the chief clerk routinely prepares) to substitute the House language for the language passed by the Senate.

In the Senate, the procedure is different. When a House bill is substituted for a Senate bill on the Senate floor, the Senate automatically places the Senate language back into the bill.

The Senate author must propose an amendment if he or she wishes to use the House language.

Amended Bills

The House and Senate often pass the same bill in different versions.

When one house amends a bill that was approved by the other body, it sends the bill back to its house of origin. The house of origin must either accept all of the changes made by the other house, or refuse to accept them and by motion, send the bill to conference committee to work out a compromise bill that both bodies can accept.

Concurrences

When the amended bill goes back to the house of origin, a copy of the amendments from the other body are given to the author for the author's information. One option the author has is to accept the other body's amendments (to concur in the amendments). Many times amendments in the other body are minor, non-controversial, or simply technical in nature. Sometimes the bill has left the house of origin with an amendment that the author did not want on, and it may have been taken off by the other body. And sometimes the bill is more to the author's liking as it passed in the other body.

The motion to concur is made by the author and must be approved by the body. Any member can make a motion to refuse to concur with the other body's amendments, and to appoint a conference committee to work out the differences. The motion to refuse to concur and to go to conference would be taken up first.

Assuming that the motion to concur prevailed, the bill would be given a third reading, as amended by the Senate, and the bill would be up for repassage.

Conference Committee

When either the House or Senate refuses to accept the version of a bill as amended by the other body, a motion is made to refuse to concur with the other body's amendments and send the bill to a conference committee. That means the House and Senate each appoint three or five of its members to serve on the conference committee and negotiate a compromise bill.

In the House, the members are appointed by the speaker, and in the Senate by leadership of the majority caucus.

Conferees (conference committee members) are selected to uphold the position of their respective houses, but they have some latitude in trying to reach a compromise.

A bill's chance of passing usually increases as it moves through each step of the journey. But it may have rough going in conference committee. First, the bill is in conference committee because strong differences kept the two bodies from agreeing on the same version. Secondly, most conference committees work in the closing days of session, under great time pressure. Usually, time permitting, each side makes some compromises, and sometimes bills are re-written incorporating elements from each body's position.

House research and/or committee staff acting as advisors to the conferees often draft language for the conferees. The conference committee report itself, however, is prepared by the revisor of statutes. Any member of a conference committee may request the drafting of all or part of a conference committee report.

When a majority of the conferees have signed the report, it is returned to the revisor who makes final checks, and returns it to the floor of origin for action (if the bill was a House bill, the conference committee report must be adopted and the bill repassed by the House first.) The revisor's staff will normally attend meetings of conference committees but, in any case, must be kept informed on the progress of the conference committee.

Conference committees are, in fact, joint meetings of separate committees; consequently, in conference committees, the committees from each house vote separately, and a majority vote of each committee is required to take any action. If the conference committee votes to adopt the report, the measure is then presented to the body. This is the compromise bill which has been agreed upon and, therefore, cannot be amended. The representatives and senators can either accept the report, give the bill its third reading as amended by conference and repass the bill, or it can refuse to accept the report and send it back to conference. As a part of the motion to refuse to adopt the report of the conference committee, the author of the motion can request that a new conference committee be appointed to work out the differences in the bill.

When both houses repass a bill as amended by conference committee, it is transmitted to the governor for consideration.

How a Bill Becomes a Law in Minnesota

Idea

1 A bill is an idea for a new law or an idea to change an old law. Anyone can suggest an idea for a bill — an individual, consumer group, professional association, government agency, or the governor. Most often, however, ideas come from legislators, the only ones who can begin to move an idea through the process. There are 134 House members and 67 senators.

Introduction

4 The chief House author of the bill introduces it in the House; the chief Senate author introduces it in the Senate. Identical bills introduced in each body are called companion bills. The bill introduction is called the first reading. The presiding officer of the House then refers it to an appropriate House committee for discussion; the same thing happens in the Senate.

General Register

7 In the House, the General Register serves as a parking lot where bills await action by the full body. Bills chosen to appear on the Calendar for the Day or the Fiscal Calendar are drawn from the General Register.

In the Senate, a different procedure is used. Bills are listed on the General Orders agenda. Senate members, acting as the "committee of the whole," have a chance to debate the issue and offer amendments on the bill. Afterwards, they vote to recommend: passage of the bill, progress (delay action), or further committee action. And sometimes they recommend that a bill not pass. From here, the bill is placed on the Calendar.

Conference

9 If the House and Senate versions of the bill are different, they go to a conference committee. In the House, the speaker appoints three or five representatives, and in the Senate, the Subcommittee on Committees of the Committee on Rules and Administration selects the same number of senators to form the committee. The committee meets to work out differences in the two bills and to reach a compromise.

Legal form

2 The Office of the Revisor of Statutes and staff from other legislative offices work with legislators in putting the idea for a new law into proper legal form. The revisor's office is responsible for assuring that the proposal's form complies with the rules of both bodies before the bill can be introduced into the Minnesota House of Representatives and the Minnesota Senate.

Committee

5 The bill is discussed in one or more committees depending upon the subject matter. After discussion, committee members recommend action — approval or disapproval — to the full House and full Senate. The House committee then sends a report to the House about its action on the bill; the Senate committee does likewise in the Senate.

Calendar for the Day

8 In the House, the Calendar for the Day is a list of bills the House Rules and Legislative Administration has designated for the full House to vote on. Members can vote to amend the bill, and after amendments are dispensed with, the bill is given its third reading before the vote of the full body is taken. The House also has a Fiscal Calendar, on which the chair of the House Ways & Means Committee or House Taxes Committee can call up for consideration any tax or finance bill that has had a second reading. The bills are debated, amended, and passed in one day.

Floor

10 The conference committee's compromise bill then goes back to the House and the Senate for another vote. If both bodies pass the bill in this form, it is sent to the governor for his or her approval or disapproval. (If one or both bodies reject the report, it goes back to the conference committee for further consideration.)

Authors

3 Each bill must have a legislator to sponsor and introduce it in the Legislature. That legislator is the chief author whose name appears on the bill along with the bill's file number to identify it as it moves through the legislative process. There may be up to 34 co-authors from the House and four from the Senate. Their names also appear on the bill.

Floor

6 After the full House or Senate accepts the committee report, the bill has its second reading and is placed on the House agenda called the General Register or the Senate agenda called General Orders. (A committee can recommend that non-controversial bills bypass the General Register or General Orders and go onto the Consent Calendar, where bills usually pass without debate.) After this point, House and Senate procedures differ slightly.

In the Senate, bills approved by the "committee of the whole" are placed on the Calendar. At this point, the bill has its third reading, after which time the bill cannot be amended unless the entire body agrees to it. Toward the end of the session, the Senate Committee on Rules and Administration designates bills from the General Orders calendar to receive priority consideration. These Special Orders bills are debated, amended, and passed in one day.

A bill needs 68 votes to pass the House and 34 votes to pass the Senate. If the House and Senate each pass the same version of the bill, it goes to the governor for a signature.

Governor

11 Once the governor has the bill, he or she may: sign it, and the bill becomes law; veto it within three days; or allow it to become law by not signing it. During session, the House and Senate can override a governor's veto. This requires a two-thirds vote in the House (90 votes) and Senate (45 votes). The governor also may "line-item veto" parts of a money bill, or "pocket veto" a bill passed during the last three days of the session by not signing it within 14 days after final adjournment.

Tax and Spending Bills

Development

Development of the key taxing and spending bills follows a track somewhat different from that followed for development of most other bills.

Budget Resolution

Each biennium, the Ways & Means Committee meets to discuss the state's budget situation and to pass a budget resolution. The committee waits until after the state releases its February budget forecast to discuss the resolution. This resolution sets, as a single amount, the maximum limitation on general fund expenditures, especially as they relate to the Legislature's taxing and appropriating powers, for the fiscal biennium. This resolution must be approved by the full House before becoming effective. The Ways & Means Committee also sets budget targets for each finance committee and the Taxes Committee.

Collecting Money: Omnibus Tax Bill

The Omnibus Tax Bill, which must originate in the House, represents a comprehensive summation of the House Taxes Committee's activities during the legislative session. It is the product of many formal hearings and informal deliberations among legislative leaders, the governor's office, and others.

Work begins on several fronts. The full committee usually begins work on personal income tax and corporate income tax matters. Subcommittees may begin work in such areas as property taxes, sales taxes, economic development, or fiscal disparities. When necessary, the Taxes Committee chair can appoint members to serve on subcommittees to review specific tax issues. Since the Taxes Committee has responsibility for the revenue side of the state budget, the usual starting point is an evaluation of revenues being raised by the current tax structure, the revenue items in the governor's proposed biennial budget, the effects of tax proposals on the budget, and the revenue targets listed in the budget resolution.

With the budget resolution targets in mind, the committee examines the state's fiscal outlook, using revenue forecasts provided by the Department of Finance. The full committee and subcommittees hold hearings on proposals, which may be considered for possible inclusion in the omnibus bill. (Many of the initial components may be recommendations from members and the chair.)

The full committee then holds final hearings to complete work on the bill. Separate bills referred or re-referred to the Taxes Committee and acted on may also be incorporated into the omnibus bill.

On the House floor, the Taxes Committee chair is the chief spokesperson on behalf of the omnibus bill. Other amendments may be considered here. The bill then moves to the conference committee, where it takes final shape. Differences between House and Senate versions of the bill are resolved, and other remaining tax-related legislation, considered by either body, also may be incorporated into the bill. The bill is then sent back to each body for final passage.

Spending Money: Appropriations Bills

In the past, the Minnesota Legislature has passed nine major operating budget bills, in addition to the Omnibus Tax Bill and the Omnibus Capital Budget Bill, commonly called the bonding bill, which lists all the construction and improvement projects.

However, due to the differing structure of committees between the House and the Senate, leaders have not determined specifically how many bills will be sent jointly to the governor.

Tax and Spending Bills

In the House, there are 10 finance committees that produce appropriations bills. The House rules dictate that omnibus bills emerging from finance committees cannot be combined with those from other committees. However, joint rules for the bodies will govern the process.

All bills containing items of appropriation are referred to the Ways & Means Committee before they can be brought before the full House.

The relevant finance committees are as follows:

- Agriculture & Rural Development Finance — provides funding for the Department of Agriculture, the Board of Animal Health, the Horticultural Society, and a variety of state boards.
- Environment & Natural Resources Finance — provides funding for the Department of Natural Resources, the Pollution Control Agency, and several other agencies.
- Family & Early Childhood Education Finance — provides funding for child care, Head Start and other pre-school education programs, Adult Basic Education, community education, public libraries, and other initiatives.
- Health & Human Services Finance — provides funding for the Minnesota Department of Health, the Department of Human Services, health-related boards and ombudsman offices, and other health and veterans' programs.
- Higher Education Finance — provides funding for the Minnesota State Colleges and Universities (MnSCU), the University of Minnesota, selected programs at the Mayo Medical School, and several other higher education-related agencies.
- Jobs & Economic Development Finance — provides funding for a wide variety of state boards and agencies, including the Minnesota State Arts Board, the Department of Commerce, the Department of Economic Security, the Minnesota Historical Society, the Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitation Board, the Department of Labor and Industry, the Public Utilities Commission, and the Department of Trade and Economic Development. The committee also provides funding for homelessness prevention, affordable housing, and other programs administered by the Housing Finance Agency.
- Judiciary Finance — provides funding for the state's criminal justice and judicial system.
- K-12 Education Finance — provides funding for the Minnesota Department of Children, Families and Learning; primary and secondary schools; and related education agencies.
- State Government Finance — provides funding for the legislative branch, constitutional officers, and executive branch departments such as revenue, finance, and administration.

- Transportation Finance — provides funding for all transportation and transit-related areas, including the Department of Transportation, Metro Transit, the Department of Public Safety (transportation areas), and the Transportation Regulation Board.

Legislative work on the state budget begins in January of odd-numbered years. Early on, the Ways & Means Committee hears an overview of the state budget situation and a summary of the governor's budget recommendations. Then, each finance panel starts its work.

Each finance committee begins by having public hearings to hear from each department, agency, and system contained in the section of the budget assigned to it. They hear testimony by officials and other individuals concerning budget requests and other matters relating to their operations. The next phase is the allocation of money. During these public hearings, motions are made by the committee members to allocate funding for each department or agency. As they are approved, they become part of the panel's omnibus appropriations bill.

Bills are also referred to the finance committees that may have fiscal implications to particular areas of state government. A fiscal note may be requested on those bills that may have a financial impact on the state budget. House rules dictate that the total of all bills with a fiscal impact — not just the omnibus bill — will be counted against that committee's budget target.

After the finance committees have completed work on the bills, they are considered by the Ways & Means Committee. When the bills are taken up on the House floor, the committee chair defends the bill prepared by his or her committee. After the House passes the bills, they are sent to the Senate. Differences in the House-passed version and the Senate-passed version are resolved by a joint conference committee.

When the governor receives an omnibus appropriations bill, he or she can sign it, let it become law without a signature, line-item veto spending provisions, or veto the bill entirely. Unless otherwise specified, appropriations are not effective until the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1. In the second year of the biennium, the Ways & Means Committee considers adjustments that may need to be made in the state budget as well as new bills that may have financial implications.

The Governor's Role

The Governor

A bill that has passed both legislative bodies in identical form is “enrolled” (compared with all records to ensure final agreement to one single version of House and Senate bills and carefully and accurately copied into a presentation format). The enrolled copy is signed by both presiding officers and by the chief clerk of the House and the secretary of the Senate and presented to the governor. During the session, it is the date of the revisor’s presentation of the bill to the governor, not the date of final passage, which starts the clock running for deadlines for the governor’s action on the bill.

The governor has several options:

- The governor may sign a bill and it becomes law.
- When the Legislature is in session, a bill becomes law without the governor’s signature if he or she does not return it to the house of origin with a statement of objections within three days after receiving it.
- If the governor objects to a bill, he or she can veto it and send a message to the Legislature explaining the actions. The governor can also veto specific items of appropriation in an appropriations bill and allow the remainder to become law (line-item veto). A two-thirds vote in each house is needed to override a veto (90 votes in the House and 45 votes in the Senate).
- A bill vetoed after the Legislature is adjourned at the end of an odd-numbered year is returned to its house of origin and tabled. The vetoed bill may be taken up after the “interim recess” (time between sessions) when the Legislature reconvenes.
- Special rules apply to bills passed during the last three days before final adjournment in the even-numbered year. The Legislature has three extra days to send the enrolled bill to the governor. The governor has 14 calendar days following final adjournment in the even-year sessions to make a decision on a measure. This period includes a three-day period immediately following the session, during which the bill might not have been presented yet. During this period, the governor must sign all bills he or she wishes to become law.

Any bill not signed and deposited with the secretary of state within the 14-day period does not become law. Sometimes, late in the session, the governor will intentionally delay a veto until it is too late for the Legislature to override the action. Such a “pocket veto” automatically kills the bill.

The attorney general routinely reviews all bills passed by the Legislature and advises the governor as to the constitutionality of each measure.

The New Law

To be “enacted,” a bill must pass the Legislature, be approved by the governor or repassed over the governor’s veto, and be filed with the secretary of state. (This constitutional office is the permanent custodian of official state documents.)

Acts, except those containing appropriations, take effect on Aug. 1 following enactment, unless another date is specified in the act itself. Most appropriations acts take effect on July 1, the beginning of the fiscal year.

Special Sessions

The governor may call the Legislature into special session during the temporary adjournment between the first and second year of a legislative biennium, or after final adjournment, to take emergency action or to act on important issues left undecided at the close of a regular session.

The Governor's Role

The governor can suggest the agenda for the session but cannot dictate the measures to be considered or the length of the special session.

A special session is a separate legislative session. It is not a continuation of a regular session. Officers elected for the regular session serve in the special session, and the rules adopted for the regular session remain in effect, unless the body provides otherwise.

A special session has its own records, which may be published separately or in conjunction with the records of the preceding regular session.

Any legislation to be considered must follow the same steps that would be required in a regular session.

After the Session

Interim

Adjournment of the Legislature at the end of the first year of a biennial session does not mean the end of the road for a bill.

Bills that are in committee at the end of the first annual session may be heard during the interim recess. Bills on the Consent Calendar or General Register are returned to the standing committee last acting on the bill. Bills in conference committees and bills that have been vetoed after adjournment are returned to their house of origin, where they are tabled and members of the conference committee are discharged. They may be taken from the table in the second year's regular session and acted upon.

Activities

The interim recess also is an opportunity for committees and individual legislators to have meetings in communities throughout the state.

Authors can use the time to educate fellow legislators and the public about their pending bills and to build support.

Wide-ranging compromises are sometimes reached during the recess interim hearings and during the second year of the biennial session.

When the Legislature adjourns "sine die" (at the end of the even-numbered year, terminating the two-year session), all bills which have not received final approval in identical form by both bodies do not become law.

Some ideas are introduced in every session for a number of years before they win final approval and receive the governor's signature.

Publications

Member-Oriented Publications

Minnesota Statutes

Permanent and general laws, which apply to all citizens, are published in bound volumes called Minnesota Statutes. Included are laws which apply to: the Legislature; the executive branch, including state departments; the judiciary and courts; tax policy; public safety and police authority; towns, cities, and counties; commerce and trade; private property and private rights; civil injuries and remedies; and crimes against people and property and their penalties. In this volume, laws are organized according to subject matter.

A completely new set of statutes is printed every two years. Pocket supplements containing changes in the new statutes are printed following the first year of the biennium.

At the beginning of the session each member is supplied with an up-to-date set of Minnesota Statutes.

Session Laws of Minnesota

Each “act” (new law, change in existing law, repeal of old law, proposed constitutional amendment) is printed in a bound volume called Session Laws of the State of Minnesota (informally called “Session Laws”) at the end of each annual session. Each act is a chapter in the Session Laws of the year in which it was enacted.

Special and temporary laws — line-item appropriations, laws which apply only to certain local or regional units of government, and some resolutions — are published only in this volume, which also includes a comprehensive index.

Daily Journal

The daily journals, compiled by the chief clerk of the House and the secretary of the Senate for their respective houses, are the official records of legislative proceedings.

The state constitution requires that the journal contain a record of all roll call votes. The journal also records attendance, introductions, committee reports, and reports of conference committees. The journals contain the text of official communications between the two houses, messages from the governor, and protests filed by members. The text of all amendments and motions proposed to the body are included with the actions taken upon them, but no official record is kept of the comments made in debate and discussion. However, sessions are audiotaped and filed with the Legislative Reference Library.

Minnesota is a “journal entry state,” which means that the journal is the final authority used by the courts concerning actions of the Legislature and in determining legislative intent. Therefore, it is of utmost importance that the journal be complete and accurate.

The journal is printed at the end of each day’s session, and copies are placed in binders and made available in the chamber before the next day’s session. Journal binders also are available on the leadership floors of the State Office Building and are updated daily. Copies of daily journals are available from the Chief Clerk’s Office in the Capitol.

Permanent Journals

Each year the daily journals are proofread, corrected, indexed, and certified for publication by the chief clerk and the secretary of the Senate. All members receive a bound copy of the permanent Journal of the House. Bound copies of the permanent Journal of the Senate also are available to members.

Bills

Copies of all bills pending in the House are available to legislators and the public from the Chief Clerk's Office. A master copy of each bill also is available in the caucus leadership corners in the State Office Building.

Committee members are provided copies of bills to study at the time they are taken up by the committee.

On each member's chamber desk there are two large, hard-covered binders — one containing House bills that have passed House committees and one containing Senate bills. Printed bills must lay on members' chamber desks for at least 24 hours before they can be taken up.

Unofficial engrossments of Senate bills, are printed for House members and placed in the Senate bill binders.

An index that cross-references House file number or Senate file number with page number(s) of the bill in the binder is placed inside the front cover of each binder.

Bill binders in the chambers and in the State Office Building are kept up-to-date by the House page staff.

Official Agenda

The House official agenda for each legislative day is prepared by the chief clerk, under the direction of the speaker. The General Register, Consent Calendar, Fiscal Calendar, and Calendar for the Day announced in advance are placed on members' office desks and their chamber desks prior to each daily session. (See section on Legislative Procedure, beginning on page 17, for more information regarding the official agenda.)

Constituent-Oriented Publications

The following publications, prepared and distributed by the House Public Information Office, are available to members and constituents.

Members may request quantities to distribute to Capitol visitors or at special events, such as meetings, county fairs, or classroom visits.

The House Public Information Office, a nonpartisan office, sends publications to constituents at their written or telephone requests. The office is at 175 State Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155. Phone (651) 296-2146 or 1-800-657-3550 or TTY (651) 296-9896. Documents published by the office can be made available in alternative formats to individuals with disabilities.

Session Coverage

- Session Weekly — a newsmagazine published once a week during sessions that reports daily House and committee action, lists all bill introductions, tracks bill action, provides advance committee meeting schedules, and features other information related to the legislative process.

- Session Daily — daily news updates on the House Web site, patterned after Session Weekly and organized by topic. It provides a quick snapshot of actions from committees and the House floor, as well as links to further information.

(<http://www.house.leg.state.mn.us/hinfo/sdaily/sdaily.htm>)

- New Laws — a publication prepared at the end of each session that summarizes and indexes all bills that became law during the session.

- Seating Arrangement — a chart, published once or twice during a biennium, that shows where House and Senate members sit in their respective chambers.

Directories

- Election Directory — published immediately after each general election. It includes House and Senate members' names, addresses, phone numbers, biographies, and photos.

- Members Directory (Green Book) — published early in the session. It includes the contents of the Election Directory, as well as information about service offices, majority and minority offices, House and Senate offices, committee schedules, committee assignments, state constitutional officers, and U.S. congressional representatives.

- Official Directory of the Minnesota Legislature (Red Book) — published near the end of the first session of the biennium. It includes the contents of the Members Directory with any updates necessary, as well as information about commissions, joint rules, constitutional and statutory provisions, and other relevant information.

Educational Materials

- Minnesota State Government Series — a packet of eight fact sheets (available separately) on the state and state government. They are: 1) State Profile, 2) State Symbols, 3) State Counties, 4) State Lawmakers, 5) State Legislative Information, 6) State Law Process, 7) U.S. Congress, and 8) The Three Branches of Minnesota State Government.

- Welcome to the House — a brochure that guides visitors through such things as how to testify and where to find committee schedules and obtain copies of bills.

- Capitol Steps: How Six Bills Became Law — a 32-page booklet that follows six laws as they wound their way through the legislative process. It explains both simple and complicated concepts ranging from where the idea for a law comes from to the Legislature's power of overriding a governor's veto. The book is written for ages 11 and older.

- Restoration — a booklet of photos and text describing the 1989-90 renovation of the House chamber.

Other Publications

The Minnesota Legislative Manual, more commonly known as the “Blue Book,” is prepared and published by the secretary of state every two years. This book contains a brief history of the state, the state constitution, the rules of the House and of the Senate, a photographic directory of the Legislature, maps of legislative districts, directories of the executive and judicial branches of state government, returns of primary and general elections, and other information regarding state government. Copies are published about six months after the beginning of the new legislative session.

The Minnesota Guidebook to State Agency Services is published by the Department of Administration. It includes information about state agencies and the services they provide to the public and to other agencies and units of government. Copies are available from Minnesota’s Bookstore, 117 University Ave., St. Paul, Minn.

Minnesota House of Representatives Legislative Information Manual is prepared by the House Public Information Office. The manual is a general reference and procedural booklet for House members and staff. It describes the roles of the three branches of government, including each department within the House. It also gives a step-by-step description of how a legislative session typically unfolds.

The Court Information Office has published a pamphlet which describes the purpose and procedures of the Minnesota Supreme Court.

The Legislative Reference Library is a highly specialized information resource and can obtain virtually any publication requested by a member. (A description of this office appears in the Legislative Offices section and begins on page 34.)

Legislative Web Site

Since 1994, anyone with access to the Internet has been able to find an ever-growing range of online legislative information.

By connecting to the Minnesota State Legislature’s home page, Internet users can easily find daily schedules for the House and Senate, track the status of individual bills, read the actual text of bills and statutes, and discover much, much more about activities at the Capitol.

The Legislature’s Web page is a joint effort by the House of Representatives, the Senate, the Legislative Reference Library, the Office of the Revisor of Statutes, and the Legislative Commissions.

The goal of the service is to increase citizen participation in the legislative process by providing as much legislative information as possible in an easy-to-use format.

Through the Web site, users can:

- get the full text of bills, including the latest official engrossments. This text comes from the Office of the Revisor of Statutes, which continually updates, or engrosses, bills as they are officially amended in committee or on the floor. You can even download the bill text to your computer;
- look at the status of bills. If you know the House or Senate file number of a bill, you can use this information to determine, for example, whether a bill has reached the floor or is stalled in committee;
- view standing committee rosters and track the activities of House-Senate conference committees;
- search through the catalog of the Legislative Reference Library or find “Links to the World,” where you can get information on other legislatures across the country or connect to other government- and policy-related sites, such as the Library of Congress and the White House;
- get a House member’s e-mail address, office address, phone number, and brief biography. In effect, the Official Directory of the Minnesota Legislature (the “Red Book”) is online;
- view the Journal of the House (the official record of floor action), bill introductions, and the weekly schedule of House meetings; and
- read the online versions of House publications such as Session Daily, Session Weekly, New Laws 1999, New Laws 2000, Capitol Steps: House Six Bills Became Law, and House press releases; and
- look up a current law in the electronic version of Minnesota Statutes.

Legislative Offices

Chief Clerk's Office

The Chief Clerk's Office, 211 State Capitol, (651) 296-2314, serves as a service and resource center of information for members of the House, staff, and the public. The office provides assistance, advice, and information on procedural and parliamentary matters and is responsible for the filing, printing, and distributing of legal and other records and documents. Technical assistance and maintenance of House electrical and electronic systems also is provided. A managed House World Wide Web site offers public access to daily documents.

House Desk

The area immediately below the speaker's rostrum in the House chamber is commonly known as the House Desk. It is the primary role of the House Desk staff to ensure that the House of Representatives' business is carried out smoothly and in accordance with the constitution and the Permanent Rules of the House, and all other laws and rules which relate to legislative operations and enactment of laws. To this end, the House Desk organizes the orders of business, administers and records amendments, prepares motions, records roll calls, documents official action on original bill covers, answers parliamentary questions, offers advice regarding legislative procedure, and compiles and edits the Journal of the House.

Third Floor Office

The Third Floor Office assists the House Desk with the production of all agendas, calendars, orders of business, and the compilation of daily and permanent journals. It also oversees duplication of amendments, concurrences, conference committee reports, non-controversial motions, resolutions, introductions, committee reports, and other documents for floor use. In addition, the Third Floor prepares messages for the Senate and governor as directed by the House Desk.

Front Office

This office primarily works with the public. It organizes, files, and distributes printed bills under consideration by the House, calendars, journals, chapters, legislative resource books, and other documents to the public, legislators, and staff. In addition, the Front Office prepares an index of printed page numbers for House bills and Senate bills, an identical bill list on House files. At the end of the session, this office produces a bill rider list and compiles a listing of all new laws in numerical order by Chapter number, House File number, and Senate File number.

Index Department

The Index Department was established by the Permanent Rules of the House. Staff people write short and long descriptions of all bills under consideration by the House. The bills are then listed under appropriate topic areas. The Index Department records all official House actions on legislation from the Journal of the House. The data is available on the Legislature's Web site (<http://www.leg.state.mn.us>) to help the public, staff, and lawmakers track legislation. In addition to this, the Index Department compiles and maintains computer generated indexes by topic, author, companion bill, and statutory reference. A conference committee bill report also is produced. After the session ends, a "Session Statistics" report is made available to the public through the department.

For bill status inquiries, select reports, or information on training and use of the House Index Information system, please contact the House Index Department at (651) 296-6646.

Office of the Revisor of Statutes

The Office of the Revisor of Statutes, 700 State Office Building, (651) 296-2868, provides services to members of both houses of the Legislature, the governor and other constitutional officers, and state agencies and departments. The services of the office are nonpartisan and confidential. The office consists of attorneys, editors, computer specialists, and support personnel. Members and staff may request services by writing, calling, or visiting the office.

Bill Drafting

The revisor's office works from instructions by a representative, a senator, a person authorized by a legislator to seek the services of the revisor's office, the governor, and constitutional officers. These instructions may be very simple; some only state a problem and request a statutory solution. They also may be very detailed. Sometimes they include a draft of a proposed bill prepared by a researcher or an attorney for a department, local unit of government, or lobbying group.

Amendment Drafting

At the request of legislators or others authorized by legislators, office attorneys draft amendments for committee meetings or floor sessions. Office attorneys and support staff are available during House floor sessions to provide advice and drafting assistance, including the drafting, keyboarding, proofing, and copying of amendments. They are stationed just outside of the chambers on the east and west sides.

An advanced computer text management system is used to assist in drafting, engrossing, and publishing. The revisor's computer staff also create and maintain programs for other legislative work. These programs are used for the House and Senate journals, House and Senate index, House and Senate calendars and agendas, and information provided on the Internet.

Other Services

Other duties of the revisor's office include drafting House committee reports for consideration by the House, integrating amendments into bills as they are adopted (engrossing), drafting conference committee reports for consideration by the House and Senate, preparing comparisons for the House and Senate desks and conference committees, preparing and transmitting formal copies to the governor for signature (enrolling), publishing laws passed at each annual session of the Legislature (Session Laws), approving and drafting administrative rules for state agencies, publishing a collection of permanent and general laws in their most current language (Minnesota Statutes), and publishing the collection of administrative rules (Minnesota Rules). Attorneys from the revisor's office serve as legal counsel for the Joint Subcommittee on Claims. The revisor's office prepares and submits legislative bills that clarify or correct errors in statutes and administrative rules.

House Research Department

The House Research Department, 600 State Office Building, (651) 296-6753, Fax: (651) 296-9887, <http://www.house.leg.state.mn.us/hrd/hrd.htm>, is the research and legal services office of the Minnesota House of Representatives. House Research was established by the House of Representatives in 1967 to provide research and legal services to the House and to House members and committees. The department is an agency of the House of Representatives as a whole, rather than of a committee or caucus. The department is nonpartisan; its services are available to all members of the House, without regard to partisan affiliation or legislative position. The department strives to be politically neutral and impartial on the issues. Its staff does not advocate, endorse, promote, or oppose legislation or legislative decisions.

The work of House Research Department focuses on legislative decision-making — on helping members and committees develop and evaluate legislative policies and laws. The department delivers its services in three major ways: First, it provides legal and research staff support for each House committee. Second, individual members of the House may use the services of the department simply by calling, writing, or stopping by the offices on the 6th floor of the State Office Building. (All such requests are treated as confidential, meaning that no one outside of House Research will be told of the request or the response without the permission of the member.) Third, the department publishes information and analysis for use by all members of the House.

House Research has three missions:

1. To help legislators and committees make informed legislative decisions by providing information and analysis that is: (a) credible, impartial, and accurate, and (b) useful and relevant to legislative decisions.

Department staff members gather and summarize information on programs and policies of the federal government, Minnesota, and other states; analyze federal and state policies and laws; conduct empirical research studies; and maintain computer programs used by the House to analyze public finance and other government programs. The department publishes the results for use by all legislators. Research is also done for committees, as part of the legislative process, and for individual legislators on request.

2. To help legislators and committees develop legislation that carries out their legislative decisions by providing expert and experienced help in developing and drafting legislation and in evaluating and understanding the effects of legislation.

Department staff members analyze options, draft bills and amendments, summarize laws and bills, provide information, and answer questions. This work is done for committees, as part of the legislative process, and for individual legislators on request.

3. To advise the House on legal matters arising from the conduct of House business.

Attorneys in House Research serve as legal counsel to the House as a government agency.

Fiscal Analysis Department

Fiscal analysts provide legislative support for the House finance, taxes, and appropriations committees, as well as function as a department providing information to the Legislature on fiscal issues. The finance committees and divisions, Taxes Committee, Capital Investment Committee, and Ways & Means Committee are all staffed by fiscal analysts who provide professional help to committee members making decisions on state finances.

Fiscal staff provide budget background information, analyze spending and revenue proposals, track legislative decisions, and draft legislation to implement budget decisions. Fiscal analysts also respond to requests from members needing analyses or information on government finances. Publications providing background information on state finance issues are published by the fiscal staff.

Legislative Reference Library

The Legislative Reference Library, 645 State Office Building, (651) 296-3398, established in 1969 as a non-partisan service to the Legislature and its staff, has evolved into a highly specialized information resource. The library handles all inquiries — whether in person, by letter, phone, or e-mail (refdesk@library.leg.state.mn.us) — objectively, confidentially, and in a nonpartisan manner.

The Collection

The library's collection contains material on topics which have been, are, or may become of concern to lawmakers. The library staff's experience with the Internet and other electronic resources and membership in an inter-library loan network means that the resources available to the Legislature are, in effect, unlimited.

The library reading room contains a collection of books, state documents, magazines, newspapers, and background materials. In addition to this collection, the library maintains files of newspaper clippings arranged by subject, legislative district, and name. Tape recordings of House and Senate floor sessions and committee hearings and committee minute books are retained and made accessible by the library.

The library has an extensive collection of publications by state departments and agencies, including budget documents, annual reports of state departments, reports by legislative staff, reports from consultants, and much more. In addition, the library retains all recent Senate and House bills for use by members, staff, and the public.

Library staff members use a variety of electronic resources, including the Internet, LEXIS/NEXIS, and Dow Jones, while its CD-ROM collection includes backfiles of the St. Paul Pioneer Press, the Star Tribune, census data, and other data compilations. The library also manages "Links to the World," a collection of public policy Internet sites.

The library offers two other popular services: Inside Issues (regular, customized lists of articles on topics selected by service users) and the Contents Page Service (photocopies of contents pages from journals chosen by service users).

Loan Privileges

Legislators, researchers, and committee staff may borrow material for a three-week period. Requests can be made by telephone or e-mail (circdesk@library.leg.state.mn.us). Materials that are available within the Capitol complex are delivered within 24 hours. When material is borrowed from another library, there may be a delay between initiation of the request and delivery.

Committee Staff

Committee Administrator

Committee administrators are assigned to each chairperson. They are responsible for a wide range of duties including research, organization of materials, and liaison between the chair, members, and constituent services.

Committee Legislative Assistant

Committee legislative assistants are assigned to a committee chair and perform secretarial duties for the chair, keep records of the current status of every bill in the possession of the committee, assist members in drafting amendments, and keep records of all committee actions. The legislative assistants gather materials necessary for the preparation of the official reports of the committee for approval by the chair and submission to the full House.

Chief Committee Clerk

The chief committee clerk coordinates activities among the Chief Clerk's Office, the Office of the Revisor of Statutes, and House committee legislative assistants for the timely drafting and filing of committee reports.

DFL, GOP Caucus Staff

Both political parties have partisan caucus staff to help them with scheduling, research, the media, constituent requests, information systems, and word processing.

Leadership Staff

A select few staff members are considered leadership staff. They assist in caucus and House management and planning, staff coordination, overall staff support services, and act as political advisers. Some may also assist in scheduling House floor sessions and overseeing the flow of bills on the House floor.

Legislative Assistant

Most members share the services of a legislative assistant with another member. Duties include scheduling, handling constituent inquiries, and coordinating the daily activities of the members.

Research

The research departments assist members and staff in developing and interpreting public policy by providing information which serves both the political and policy analysis needs of the members and staff. Research assists in the inception, development, drafting, presentation and summarizing of bills, amendments, and other legislation.

Media

The media departments help members better communicate with their local press. They assist members in their attempts to open up the communication lines. Writing service options include: press releases, news columns, letters to the editor, legislative reports, newsletters, questionnaires, speeches, and photo cutlines. The departments also provide radio and graphics services.

Constituent Services

Constituent services departments serve as the chief clearinghouse for all requests that require casework for a constituent and/or background information/research for a member.

Information Systems

The information systems departments coordinate the development of computer systems throughout the GOP and DFL caucuses, respectively. The information systems staff administers the network, provides software and hardware support, fields computer questions, and trains members and staff in the use of their computers.

Word Processing

Word processing services produce routine letters, reports, and other materials from hard copy and samples, on the computer network, in a manner that meets the word processing needs of their caucus.

House Public Information Office

The House Public Information Office, 175 State Office Building, (651) 296-2146, is a nonpartisan service of the Minnesota House of Representatives serving the public, representatives of the media, and members of the House. The office policy in working with each of these audiences is to remain politically neutral and impartial on the issues.

Public Access

The office is the first point of contact for members of the public. Staff members handle general requests for information, such as helping constituents contact their representatives, mail out requested publications, and answer questions about the legislative process. The office places most of its printed materials, such as publications, committee schedules, and directories on the Internet at: <http://www.leg.state.mn.us>

Publications

The House Public Information Office publishes the Session Weekly, a newsmagazine covering each legislative session that provides synopses and updates of bills pending before the House. It also has a topically-organized online companion, called Session Daily. The office also publishes a variety of legislative directories and informational material on state government and the legislative process. New Laws, for example, includes highlights and a summary of all bills passed by lawmakers and signed or vetoed by the governor during each legislative session. Educational publications developed by this office are often used in classrooms of all levels. (For more House Public Information Office publications, see Constituent-Oriented Publications on page 30.)

Photography

The photography division of the House Public Information Office, (651) 296-9284, accepts assignments from both political caucuses and other House offices such as the High School Page Program. The photographers serve on the Session Weekly staff, providing news and feature photographs. They take member and staff portraits; candid photos of members in committee, on the floor, and with constituents; and photographs of Capitol activities. In addition, the photographers document House floor sessions and House committee hearings.

Minnesota State Fair

The House Public Information Office is responsible for organizing the operation of the Minnesota House of Representatives exhibit at the Minnesota State Fair each year. The goal of the House exhibit is to introduce people to state government, help them find answers to questions, and familiarize them with the office's literature about the legislative process. Staff members also arrange for members and other staffers to work in the booth to greet fairgoers and to help inform the public about how to access information about their government and representatives. The House and Senate exhibits are side-by-side in the Education Building at the fairgrounds, allowing for greater cooperation between the two bodies.

House Television Services

House Television Services, Room 216C, State Capitol, (651) 297-1338, was established in 1994 as a nonpartisan legislative office to open the political process to the public. The chief sergeant is appointed by the speaker.

The assistant sergeants, postmaster, and assistant postmaster are elected by the House members to serve with the chief sergeant as officers of the House.

Pages

Pages serve as support staff for all House and conference committee hearings and aid all departments in accomplishing their duties. During session, pages assist members in the House chamber by obtaining copies of bills or other legislative materials and delivering messages from the public or other members. They also assist in preparing for a daily session by placing agendas and orders on each member's desk as well as passing out amendments and other data during debate. Pages also maintain chamber and State Office Building files of Senate and House journals and copies of bills pending before the House.

Parking and Transportation

The sergeant's office assigns parking spaces for members and staff. Parking information for the public is available from the sergeant's office for those attending meetings or visiting House lawmakers. Transportation services for "away from the complex" meetings are provided upon request.

Security

The sergeant's office serves as a liaison with Capitol Security in providing security for House office areas. A major role for the chief sergeant is to provide a safe environment for members and staff at all times, particularly during session in the House chamber or during committee meetings. The assistant sergeants, postmaster, and assistant postmaster aid in this duty.

The chief sergeant is responsible for decorum and protocol, and may be requested by the speaker to locate and escort members to the chamber during a roll call vote. Members may be escorted from the chamber, or even members of the public from the gallery, if they become disruptive.

The sergeant's office orders and distributes keys for offices, files, and desks; unlocks committee rooms for meetings; and issues Capitol Complex key cards.

The postmaster coordinates with the chief sergeant-at-arms and House Administrative Services to maintain responsibility for approximately $100,000 worth of postage per year. The postmaster, during session days, coordinates with the chief sergeant to insure the security and smooth operation of the House chamber. The postmaster also is responsible for supervising temporary chamber staff.

Educational Programs

An assistant sergeant coordinates the High School Page Program and the College Internship Program. Another responsibility is to organize and lead seminars about the legislative process and conduct tours for constituents and special guests upon request.

High School Page Program

A nonpartisan student activity brings juniors from more than 500 state public and non-public high schools to spend a week at the Capitol and serve as pages. The program encourages involvement in the legislative process and in state government. Some activities include meeting with individual members and key officials of the three branches of government, attending committee hearings and educational seminars, and serving as pages in the House chamber alongside the full-time pages.

College Internship Program

Interns work for members or key staff by performing duties, such as conducting research, following the status of bills, or monitoring committees to receive academic credit from their college or university. Internships are available throughout the year and the program provides for orientation and seminars throughout the year.

Duplicating

House Duplicating, 35 State Office Building (651) 296-8611, reproduces the Permanent Journal of the House, bills, amendments, committee reports, schedules, and other legislative materials requested by House members and staff.
